

Kevin Rathbun Steak Completes Expansion With The New Beltline Patio

For Immediate Release

ATLANTA, GA., February 15th, 2014: Kevin Rathbun Steak has completed the addition to the steakhouse by adding a nine-hundred square foot covered patio area located directly on the Atlanta Beltline.

The new Beltline Patio comes equipped with two ten-foot heating elements, a sixteen foot tall reclaimed brick fireplace, a six-foot wide Big Ass ceiling fan, two standup cocktail rails, and a comfortable seating area. The area holds up to forty people for a dinner or up to seventy-five people for a cocktail reception. The Beltline Patio is steps away from the Atlanta Beltline.

With Kevin Rathbun Steak being recognized as one of the top steakhouses in the city of Atlanta, this addition will only add to our belief that Inman Park has become one of the top dining destinations in the City of Atlanta. We are deeply rooted in Inman Park and are even more excited of the possibilities that the new addition will have to our restaurant and the area of Inman Park. Seven years ago, we took a chance and built the restaurant on the proposed Beltline and we have been fortunate enough to see it into fruition.

About the building: The original building was built in the 1890's as a cotton warehouse. In 1941, the Clorox Company bought the building for its 4th production facility in the United States. Now, it is intricately restored and enhanced by an award winning team of architects and planners. Set in the heart of Inman Park, alongside the Atlanta Beltline and steps from the hugely successful Stove Works and Rathbun's & Krog Bar.
